Coastal Commission certification

Hatton freeway clears its first major hurdle

By DAVID LELAND

DESPITE LAST-MINUTE pleas from Carmel officials, a handful of area residents and the U.S. government, the state Coastal Commission Thursday unanimously accepted certification of Caltrans' plans for the Hatton Canyon Freeway project.

Meeting in San Francisco, the Coastal Commission gave its stamp of approval after a more than four-hour hearing, spent mostly on testimony targeting the "cons" of the $26 million freeway project.

The Hatton Canyon Freeway, scheduled for construction sometime in 1991, will realign the existing Highway 1 through the Hatton Canyon from Carpenter Street to Carmel Valley Road.

The current Highway 1 will then become a county-maintained "frontage road."

After a complex "urban" interchange at Carmel Valley Road, the elevated freeway will transition down into a two-lane road bridging Rio Road and the Carmel River.

Last week's hearing marks a new stage in the 30-year saga of the freeway, and paves the way for federal certification of the environmental impact statement by the Federal Highway Administration.

Earlier this year the FHA balked at sanctioning the design until the Coastal Commission decided if the content was consistent with the state Coastal Act.

The final EIS may be available for a 30-day public review sometime in January, according to Tom Pollock, Caltrans district director.

Other jurisdictions and agencies who need to give their nod before construction can begin include Monterey County, the Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

CALTRANS DISTRICT Director Tom Pollock told the Coastal Commission that safety is of the utmost importance in Caltrans' design for the Hatton Canyon Pressure.

CARMEL RESIDENT Joyce Stevens presented her idea of a practical plan for the

Any design plans for the area around the Carmel River must return to the Coastal Commission for approval.

Caltrans could have its work cut out for it with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, who introduced a letter before last week's meeting opposing the project.

"Because of our interest in the biological integrity of our nation's waters, we generally recommend against a project when its construction would result in the destruction of wetland habitat values," wrote James McKevitt, field supervisor, referring to the portion of the road that would eliminate wetlands in Hatton Canyon.

"Because alternatives exist to the proposed alignment of Highway 1 through Hatton Canyon, Caltrans has not demonstrated that impacts to riparian habitat have been avoided to the maximum extent possible," he continued. "By choosing the most damaging alternative, the applicant has not demonstrated an attempt to avoid wetland impacts."

While it remains to be seen if the U.S Fish and Wildlife Service's concerns will be addressed, the Coastal Commission last week was concerned only with areas of the freeway in the coastal zone.

The coastal zone includes the northernmost section of the freeway and the portion south of Carmel Valley Road.

OF THE almost 40 people testifying before the Coastal Commission, all but three agreed that some sort of freeway must be built to accommodate the overburdened Highway 1.

A trio of people testified that there needed to be some sort of mass transit, instead of more roads built on the peninsula.

"The more you 'feed' the car by providing fast, wide highways, the more cars multiply," said Dr. Suzanne Crowhurst Lennard.

Pollock acknowledged that the scope of the freeway is large — that is the only way to deal with the situation on the "busiest twolane road in the state.

"The solution is large because the problem is large," said Pollock, adding that Caltrans believes that the road will prevent 2,000 accidents over the next 20 years. "The main thrust is to ensure that the highway reflects good design and safety."

Agreeing with Caltrans' design plans was 4th District Supervisor Sam Karas, representing the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

"The time has come to move forward on construction of this crucially needed development," he said, adding that safety is of primary concern to the board of supervisors. "Everyday we postpone building this road we come closer to having a tragedy in that area."

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, who has also been representing the board, could not attend the meeting due to serious injuries sustained in a horseback riding accident Dec. 10.

Representatives of state Sen. Henry Mello and Assemblyman Eric Seastrand also pledged support for Caltrans' design.

"The proposal put forth by Caltrans is the only one that makes sense," said Eric Daniels, representing Seastrand.

Perhaps the most eloquent plea for the freeway came from Dr. Joseph Noto, a retired dentist who moved to the peninsula in 1952.

Noto said he initially opposed the fourlaning of the freeway at Carmel Hill during the 1950s, but "I was wrong."

"We must accept change as a fact of life," he said, adding that it should be expected that tourists will flock to the peninsula. "When you tell the world you have a lovely and breath-taking road along the coast, you must expect them to come and enjoy it."

BUT THERE is no amount of argument that can sway those who believe that Caltrans' plans will forever alter the ambiance of the Monterey Peninsula.

Carmel Mayor Jean Grace said she is convinced that the Carpenter Street interchange, with its 50-foot overpasses, will adversely affect the city.

"This Los Angeles-style interchange would be totally out of scale with a community that has no stoplights, average street widths of 35 feet and no structure taller than two stories," she said.

She added that, while Carmel endorses the "concept" of the Hatton Canyon Freeway, the current design does not fit the bill.

"The city council finds the proposed plan reflects a typical freeway design built to typical freeway standards," she said. "(That's) a distressing situation considering that this freeway will pass through some of the most beautiful native stands of Monterey Pine...and riparian vegetation along the California coast."

Some, like local architect Joyce Stevens, brought along detailed plans for a freeway that they said would take less of a toll on the ecology.

Stevens made no bones about her feelings of the current state-of-the-art freeway design.

"It does everything but make coffee, but who needs it here?" she asked, adding that there is no need for a high-tech freeway travelling south. "Why are we firing people out of the canyon to Big Sur?"

Carmel archietect Roger Larson and geologist Rogers Johnson both testified that a tunnel underneath Hatton Canyon would save countless trees.

But Pollock said that, while such a proposal may "sound nice," a tunnel could cost as much as $30 million.

Many Carmel residents, sporting red tags emblazoned with "No on Hatton," had

'The solution is large because the problem is large. The main thrust is to ensure that the highway reflects good design and safety.'

travelled by bus to the meeting and attempted to present a cohesive force to the commission.

They spent about two hours before the meeting preparing strategy in a banquet room rented at the Cathedral Hill Hotel by Carmel resident Noel Mapstad.

Skip Lloyd, president of the Carmel Residents Association, told the commission that Carmel's needs differ from other areas.

"We do deserve special consideration," he said, adding that many years have been spent keeping this area intact. "We are merely trying to preserve what we have already preserved."

He echoed the sentiments of several other people opposed to the design when he asked,

'It does everything but make coffee, but who needs it here? Why are we firing people out of the canyon to Big Sur?'

Come-lately input

Dear Editor:

The letters suggesting the widening of existing Highway 1 are not thorough. Beginning at Carmel Valley Road and continuing north would be a concrete retaining wall, starting at 40-feet-plus and being around 15 feet at South Carmel Hills Drive, to support the additional lane. Also every tree south of Mesa and Morse Drive would be removed.

Then four lanes of highway traffic would be racing through a major residential area that was here long before High Meadows, Carmel Views and Carmel Knolls. Years ago the city of Santa Barbara had the same problem, and unfortunately had the same type of self-interest, come-lately input that we are getting now. Rather than build a bypassing highway east of town, they widened a street through the center of town. It proved to be the most unsafe, unsightly and unsatisfactory approach that could have been taken. Subsequently, some of the most expensive highway construction in the state has been going on there, to correct the obvious mistake. The situation there and here is identical.

The most recent attempt to delay the Hatton Canyon project was given an assist by our local assemblyman under the hading of "letting everyone voice their opinion." For the past 30-some years just about everyone has voiced their opinion. Now that we have been updated on the negatives, let's give the professionals, who were castigated for the Pacific Grove/Hill Gate interchange, a vote of confidence and get the damn roadway built.

A dog's tale

Dear Editor:

Intrigued by signs indicating Junipero Serra Trail, we left the mission church one Sunday at 6 p.m. recently, my dog and I, to soon find ourselves in pitch darkness somewhere on a trail that was no more...somewhere on a ledge, halfway up, halfway down. Sliding proved so dangerous that my "Boy" and I decided to try the climb: bruised, scratched, scorched, through brush, sage, branches and barks, holding on whenever possible, on two or four paws while my "shepherd" waited up there yonder, whimpering to help me up as best he could.

Seeing lights and the vague contour of houses, I weathered at last through a garden on four paws, appearing in someone's house, thanks to a large housedog who showed both of us in with great enthusiasm! The owner's response was, however, distinctly unfavorable from the very start: he refused to drive us to a crossroad saying that his car "was not for dogs" even when I suggested the trunk. When I asked for a taxi, there was no response! He practically threw us out on a dark road without even lending us his flashlight.

For longer than an hour, we staggered home, two shivering souls, rather worse for wear, never happier in our lives to find home, warmth, food. In our little heaven on earth, we shall stick to trails in daylight! Dreaming a little as always, encountering the usual friendly response "from here to eternity."

In it together

Dear Editor:

I was thrilled to hear that the Pine Cone was not anti-growth in their recent editorial on the water problem. A few important facts, however, were left out of the article.

In the last 10 years our water use has increased about 40 percent. According to the water management district, "some of this increased use is explained by growth, but the principal reason for the increase is water waste." I think that is important to note.

It is also important to remember that we have in place on the peninsula an allocation system which will automatically kick in a moratorium when that alloted figure is reached. Such a system is based on fact not hysteria.

Let me add one more thought. Property owners who, for whatever reason, have left their land undeveloped still pay taxes and enjoy all the rights that their developed neighbors enjoy. We are all in this water situation together and to single out one group over another is both unfair and irresponsible. I think it is time to get tough with ourselves and the water district. They have been in power for 10 years and in that time very little has been accomplished.

Sad condition

Dear Editor:

I have been following the controversy between Monterey Life and the local writers over copyright law and reprint rights. I think the Pine Cone should be praised for creating a forum for this issue. A dispute between a magazine and the community of artists is an issue that can't help but make publishers squeamish.

Typically media management/labor disputes go relatively unreported—witness the Monterey Herald's black-out on the Monterey Life/writer's rights issue. I haven't run into even one journalist in this area who thinks that Monterey Life owns the rights to all works bought without contract over the last eight years. But there are probably some businessmen around here who would like to give Monterey Life the benefit of the doubt.

But what really amazes me is that in every instance Monterey Life has ignored the issue and refused to negotiate or even comment. I guess the new L.A.-based owners run a lawyer-based business and figure they can roll over anyone else who can't afford a lawyer. When we reach the point where we have to litigate to be heard...well it is just a sad condition. I've lived here for 15 years and this is not the spirit upon which this community has been based and hopefully it is not the spirit on which this community will become based in the future.

Knee-jerk reaction?

Dear Editor:

In a Dec. 9 editorial, The Herald argued that the recently passed Carmel transient occupancy ordinance was unfair in limiting rentals to 30 days or more.

While giving lip-service to "Carmel residents who have fought hard to maintain their community's residential character...," The Herald came down unambiguously in favor of absentee-owners who rent their homes for short periods of time. In a suggestive way, The Herald raised the spectre of elitism and denial of property rights to owners.

The argument that this action represents elitism is absurd. What it does demonstrate is "grassroots" residential support for keeping "creeping commercialization" from spreading any further in the R-1 residential zone. The residents are saying they would rather have a long-term rental next to them in the hopes of getting to know the people and fostering a neighborhood community spirit. These neighbors would be welcome to join both neighborhood associations (NECNA and CRA).

As for denial of property rights, this issue was put in perspective by Mayor Grace when she asked Bruce Britton (San Carlos Agency) about the impact on property rights of those residents living next to short-term rentals. A few examples should suffice: loud parties, large numbers of occupants, linen/supplies delivery trucks, etc.

The Herald has the right to editorialize on matters of choice; however, one could hope that they might present arguments on both sides since they are the community newspaper. Or was this simply a "knee-jerk" reaction to anything that even remotely appears to dilute a property right?

DA halts unapproved road grading in valley

By DAVID LEBAND

A PRELIMINARY in innection has been filed in Monterey County Superior Court ordering an absence Carmel Valley landowner to begin restoration of an alleged illegal grading project on his property.

Filed Monday morning by the District Attorney's office, the complaint alleges that Arizona-based attorney John A. Murphy Jr., and Little Horse Ranch Limited Partnership, have engaged in illegal business practices on their land.

The land is bordered on the south by Carmel Valley Road, the north by Palo Colorado Canyon, on the east by Highway I and west by Garrapata Redwood Estates.

Specifically, the county charges that Murphy has graded several roads on his 5,000-acre parcel in order to develop the land, according to Morgan Taylor, a deputy district attorney.

"He intended to develop the project,"
Taylor said. "This was a business venture—
I'm alleging unfair business practices."

Moreover, the state Department of Fish and Game, in a biological report to Taylor, said that the alleged grading project has adversely affected the steelhead habitat in Wildcat Canyon and Garrapata creeks.

"It's the entire food chain that we're concerned about," said Lt. Tom Pederson of the Department of Fish and Game. "The whole eco-system is affected when you alter something to that extent."

By filling the streams up with silt and sediment during the alleged grading, it may take "a dozen" years for the creeks to return to normal, Taylor said.

"The initial phase of such plan shall be destabilization of the soil, and that portion of the crossion control plan...shall be commenced immediately," the injunction states. "But no later than Jan. 10, 1989."

Murphy is being represented by Susan M. Dauphine, of the Monterey law firm of Hoge, Fenton, Jones & Appel, Inc.

Both Dauphine and Murphy were unavailable for comment at press time.

"My main concern is to get the problem solved so we don't get more damage," Taylor said.

Taylor added that he does not agree with Murphy's contention that he was merely grading additional fire roads on the land.

"I firmly believe that the allegations in the (civil) complaint are true," he said.

Taylor added that the defendant's counsel has been cooperative about the restoration process.

"For the meantime I want to give them the benefit of the doubt as far as their motives go," he said.

According to the preliminary injunction, signed by Superior Court Judge William Wunderlich, the erosion plan will be paid for by Murphy and must be approved by county planners and the state Fish and Game Department.

Taylor added that in the case of rain or "other disruptive or emergency weather contitions," additional remedies will be carried out.

COUNTY OFFICIALS maintain that John Murphy has been illegally grading roads on

The defendants must also make the land available for inspection by representative of the county, state, Coastal Commission, erosion control specialists and the District Attorney.

IT APPEARS, however, that Murphy's intentions may have to be determined by the courts — which could be an expensive proposition for the defendant.

Under the civil complaint filed against Murphy, he could be levied a fine of $2,500 each day for each of the six charges against him.

The lawsuit also demands that Murphy pay the Department of Fish and Game "all actual damages to fish, plant, bird or animal life or their habitats."

Pending completion of the work, the complaint asks that Murphy post a "performance" bond in an amount to be approved by the court to stand as security in the case of bankruptcy or default.

The complaint filed this week marks an end to county efforts began last May to get Murphy to stop work on his property, according to Carolyn Anderson, zoning inspector.

At that time, Anderson said, the county staff made Murphy aware that his work was causing erosion damage and that he did not have either a grading permit or a coastal development permit.

Anderson said Murphy refused to stop grading.

"He certainly hasn't told us why he didn't," said Anderson, when asked why Murphy ignored the county's requests.

The District Attorney's office was given the case about three weeks ago, after the zonhis Carmel Valley property in an effort to develop the land.

ing department had exhausted its options.

Murphy's alleged grading project has been a constant source of irritation to Garrapata Canyon residents who could be adversely affected by any erosion damage.

"Mr. Murphy is full of stories as to what he intends to do with his property and why he cuts miles of roads," said Todd Acheson, Garrapata Canyon resident. "It seems unlikely an obviously intelligent lawyer like Mr. Murphy would not know that county approval would be necessary for any road cuts."

This week's action also delays any filing by Monterey attorney Joel Franklin, who represents two Garrapata Canyon residents.

"We are in the investigative stage ourselves," he said, adding that he would prefer the county to solve the problem.

His clients' concerns, he said, include the possibility of landslides where erosion has begun and the possible contamination of the local water supply.

Water district inundated with residents' questions

By NANCY HILLS

SINCE LAST week, when the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board approved a 20-percent rationing plan on the peninsula starting Jan. 1, residents have been inundating the district for answers to their questions.

Ralph Holeton, the district's interim water rationing manager, can stir up a substantial breeze just by ruffling the little message slips he gets in one day. He gets more than a 100 calls per day.

His ear is usually attached to the telephone, answering questions from a confused public, but he took time out to answer some questions from The Carmel Pine Cone.

Questions that are being asked include:
• How much per day am I allowed?

There is only a per-day and per-person allotment if the household does not reduce consumption by 20 percent.

All residences are asked to reduce water consumption by 20 percent from what it was in the previous 12 months.

An example is that water consumption recorded on the 1989 January and February water bill must be 20 percent less than it was on the 1988 January and February water bill.

Residences are billed every two months.

A residence, either apartment or condominium, that reduces its own consumption by 20 percent is in compliance, no matter how much it uses per person.

• I recently moved to my current address and do not have any water history in this residence. What rationing conditions do I have to meet?

People without a 12-month history at their current address will be rationed according to the per-day per-person allotment as outlined below.

• What happens if my home does not reduce water consumption by 20 percent?

If a household has not reduced water use by 20 percent or has no previous water use history, the water bill will be flagged and then sent on to the water district.

There, the district staff will automatically check to see if the home, though not reducing by 20 percent, meets the per-person usage allotment. It is called a "lifeline rate."

Households with with two or more people living in a single-family detached home will be allowed 82 gallons a day for each person in residence.

In apartments and condominiums with two or more inhabitants, the allotment is 46 gallons each day for each person.

In households of only one person, a single-family detached home receives 122 gallons per day and an apartment and condominium with only one inhabitant, 68 gallons per day.

(Last week The Carmel Pine Cone erred in printing that an apartment with one person receives 122 gallons per day. It is only a single-family detached home with one person that receives 122 gallons per day.)

As stated before, households that have reduced water consumption by 20 percent, no matter what the per-person consumption is, will not have to comply with the above "lifeline rate."

• I live in a second kitchen in Carmel. Is that an apartment or a single-family detached home?

Holeton explained that if the granny unit or second kitchen has a separate meter, and is detached from the main house, it will be considered a single-family detached home.

Each "meter" will receive a postcard from the district requesting information about how many people use the water going through that meter — or how many people

If more than one residence, a main home and a second kitchen, share one meter, the number of people on that one meter should be listed.

• What if I cannot meet either the 20 percent reduction or the "lifeline rate, especially if I have a medical problem in the home?

People with medical reasons for not reducing water consumption should file for a variance. Holeton suggested that those people wait until January when the district will have its variance forms completed and ready to be filled out.

The form will outline what kinds of proof the applicant will need to provide.

• I have livestock and cannot tell them to drink 20 percent less. What do I do?

Try to reduce 20 percent somewhere, and if it is completely impossible, apply for a variance.

• What about businesses?

Commercial meters, which are billed every month, must also reduce water use by 20 percent.

Businesses can, if unable to reduce by 20 percent or have no previous water use history, apply for a "type of business" allotment. That is a ration the district has designated for each type of business. A list is available at the district.

• What is the penalty for rationing violations?

As approved by the board, the first violation will result in a warning only.

If during the second billing period the pro-activities and

freeway would be more appropriate and would solve local residents' problems.

The common theme of those testifying against the design was the fear that the peninsula will lose what makes it special.

"Don't be the Coastal Commission that opens the door for Monterey County to resemble another San Jose," said Carmel resident Barbara Brooks. "If you don't stand firm on protecting our coast, who will?"

For Sally McPhail, who lives one block from where the freeway will be built on Hatton Road, the shame lies in the thousands of Monterey pines that will be cut down to make way for the freeway.

"Carmel and Carmel Valley will never be same again from the day that the first tree falls," she lamented. "It will never be the same."

When questioned by one person, only one of the 11-member Coastal Commission said they had walked through Hatton Canyon.

'The city council finds the proposed plan reflects a typical freeway design built to typical freeway standards. (That's) a distressing situation considering that this freeway will pass through some of the most beautiful native stands of Monterey Pine...and riparian vegetation along the California coast.'

blem has not been corrected, then the business or residence is charged for each unit over its ration.

The penalty begins at $25 for the first two units of water on a residential bill and $25 for one unit over on a commercial billing.

A unit is 748 gallons, and is the measure used by Cal-Am to meter water use.

In residential bills, the penalty increases by $25 after the first two units over the ration. The third and fourth units over the ration will cost $50 apiece plus the $25 apiece for the first two units over.

On commercial water bills, which are issued every month, it also increases by $25 a unit, but by the first unit $25; second unit $50, plus the $25 for the first; third unit $75 plus the $75 for the first and second and so on.

The same sequence is followed for residential except the $25 increase is applied to every two units because residential water bills are issued bi-monthly.

The maximum penalty for a single unit is $250.

• Where is the district's rationing headquarters located? Where can I pick up a variance form in January?

The district has opened its rationing office at 1010 Cass St., Suite B-6 (upstairs), Monterey, CA 93940.

The telephone number is 372-1148.

Water district forms new Water Miser Club

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District has announced the formation of its new "Water Miser Club" — to recognize residents and businesses in the community who are concerned about the current water supply status, and have made efforts to voluntarily reduce their water use.

The members of this honored club will be recognized as community leaders in the area of water conservation; people who set good examples, and encourge others to participate in helping to save our precious water supply.

The district invites any resident or business who has either saved 15 percent or more over last year's water consumption, or has continuously been a "frugal" water user, to send their name, address, telephone number, and supporting documentation (a water bill copy is sufficient), to: MPWMD Water Miser Club, P.O. Box 85, Monterey, CA 93942.

In addition to receiving a membership certificate, each Water Miser Club member will be considered for a special monthly award, presented at the district's board of directors meeting.

PHASE III WATER RATIONING PROGRAM

RESIDENTIAL PROCESS

STEP ONE:

Reduce your water use by 20% or more over the same period in the base year (October 1, 1987 to September 30, 1988)

STEP TWO:

Reduce (or maintain) your water use to an amount equal to or less than the following "per capita" standards:

Type of	Number of Residents:
Dwelling	One	Two or More
Apartment/ Condominium/Townhouse	68 gallons per day	46 gallons per person per day
House (single family; detached)	122 gallons per day	82 gallons per person per day

Examples: 1. You live alone in an apartment. You can either: A) reduce your water use by 20% over the same period in the base year, or B) use less than or equal to 68 gallons per day.

2. You live in a house with three other family members. You can either: A) reduce your water use by 20% over the same period in the base year, or B) use less than or equal to 4 x 82, or 328 gallons per day.

COMMERCIAL PROCESS*

Reduce total water consumption by 20% or more over the same period in the base year (October 1, 1987 to September 30, 1988).

Optional Baseline Process:

Businesses may apply for a baseline "per capita" standard, based on the specific land use type, and reduce (or maintain) water consumption to an amount equal to or lower than the baseline standard. Contact the MPWMD to apply for this option at 372-1148.

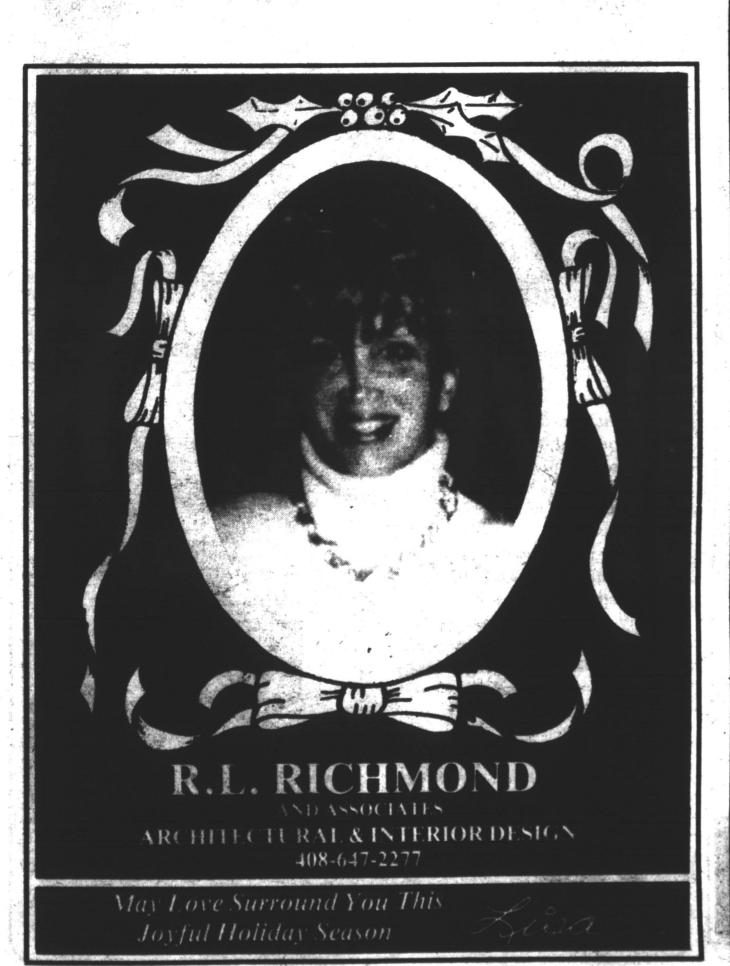

Example: The baseline standard for a fast food restaurant is .0161 acre-feet per year, per seat in the restaurant.

*Exemptions have been allowed for Hospitals, Nursing Homes, and Laundries (commercial and self-serve), such that they can use up to 100% of their consumption during the Base Year.

Rationing plan

THE MONTEREY Peninsula Water Management District's Phase III Water Rationing Program handout details the 20-percent rationing plan that will go into effect starting Jan. 1. The handout explains both the "Residential Process" for residents of the district and the "Commercial Process" for commercial users of water in the district. For a look at the most often asked questions to the district regarding the rationing plan, see page 3 of this issue.

Negligible benefits

Dear Editor:

The Medicare Catastrophic Protection Act, which goes into effect the first of next year, is a vital issue to members of this community and the entire country.

with a facility there was the first the same of the contract to

For years the most neglected and truly catastrophic medical need which has bankrupted thousands of families has been long term nursing-home care. This bill, which is set to collect millions in taxes, ignores the most primary need in the area of medical care which this country has. To pay for it by 1993 a couple could be liable for an extra $2,100 on their tax bill. And, according to the Social Security office, one cannot withdraw from it. Even if a person does not sign up for

The state of the segment of the state of Medicare when he reaches 65, he will still be liable for the tax.

What are the major advantages of this new bill? Of course the deductibles will still be in effect—one must pay them before Medicare pays anything. For medical benefits that is now $75, for hospital $540, increasing in 1989 to $560. Presently my payment to Medicare for myself only is $258.80 per month. That covers 80 percent of approved amount on a bill. Approved is the key word. Medicare almost never approves a complete bill. I have in front of me a bill of $69.50 for an x-ray I had locally. Medicare approved $42.25. They paid $33.80 of a $69.50 bill.

I quote my own records merely because I believe them representative of a multitude of others. What are the additions to this in the new bill? In 1991, after the patient has paid $600 out of pocket for drugs, Medicare will then pay 50 percent of the remainder. In 1992 this out-of-pocket expense is estimated to go up to $652, while Medicare's share will go down to 40 percent. There are other similarly restricted points.

However, the issue that is most quoted is the unlimited stay. How much use is this? According to a group of local brokers who researched the subject, the usual hospital stay is three to seven days. Then there is pressure to get one out. Medicare does not have to pay for long care not in a skilled facility.

For years the suggestion of cutting benefits for the elderly brought such an outcry that it was always abandoned. It has finally slipped through by giving it the name "benefit." What happened to "government by the people for the people"? Some of the writers of this bill must have sincerely believed they were helping people. Yet, I cannot help but think that the wise ones had to be aware that for almost negligible benefits they had found a way to acquire a huge amount of additional income taxes.

Sincere thanks

Dear Editor:

The Monterey County Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association sends our most sincere thanks to the Carmel Pine Cone for the excellent article and wonderful coverage of our "Food Faire and Wine Auction" of Oct. 30. We are very appreciative of the article in Margye Neswitz' "Social Scene," along with the great group of pictures.

Your coverage helped us in our efforts to reach out to those who need our services in coping with this devastating disease, Alzheimer's.

Many thanks to you! The pictures were wonderful!

Interest VIII LONGS Drought task forces

Dear Editor:

I have attended a number of state sponsored drought conferences of late. I can assure you that there is great concern about the threat of a third year continuous drought.

At Sen. Henry Mello's recent hearings in Salinas with his Senate Agriculture and Water Resources subcommittee, I summarized my concerns about the drought as follows:

The third year of a drought can be a major economic disaster for all of California. We must take strong action "to roll with the punches" that Mother Nature delivers to us in this Cadillac Desert in which we live. We must constrain the overuse of irrigation in agriculture, particularly during droughts. even if it means reducing crops and tillage, changing crops mixes and setting firm targets for reduced irrigation each consecutive year of a drought.

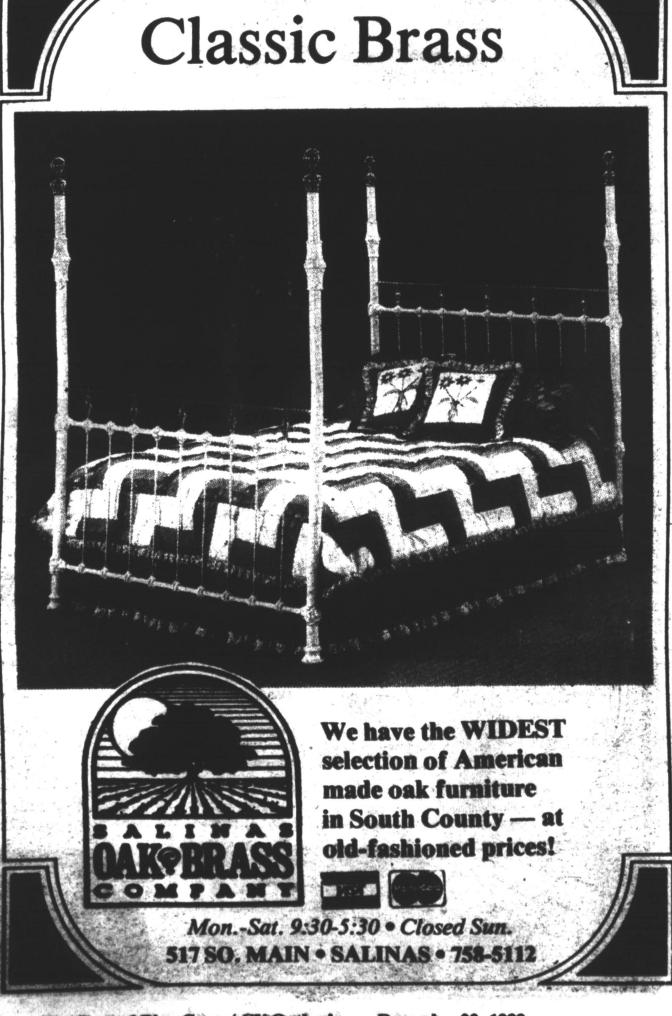

We cannot just use Band-Aid approaches and excuses. If we don't get our act together and bring irrigation under control during droughts, our water resources will be sorely deficient to maintain the California lifestyle of the past for urbanites and rurals.

Be sure your legislation treats basins like the Salinas and Pajaro valleys as unique land and water resources, apart from the other parts of California and the big valley

My question to local readers: are your leaders and water experts really understanding of the very serious economic and sociological threat of the multi-year droughts. Ask them about the new Senate Bill 32 on drought assistance and their own plans for drought contingency for 1989.

Carmel planners to meet Dec. 21

THE CARMEL Planning Commission will meet at 3:30 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 21 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

In addition to residential permits, the commission will consider a resolution that states the paving of the north field at Sunset Center and converting it into a pay parking lot will require an environmental impact report.

The council approved paving the lot at its December meeting.

No major changes expected at KRML despite antenna OK

KRML SPOKESMAN Johnny Adams cautioned local jazz listeners against expecting any significant changes at the radio station, despite the county's sanctioning of three new anten-

Approved last week by the county Planning Commission, the three 150-foot antennas, could cost as much as $250,000 to get on line. Adams said.

KRML (1410-AM) plays an all-jazz format and currently operates at 500 watts of power, from dawn until about 10 p.m.

"It doesn't mean anything until you get it up," said Adams, who hosts All That Jazz from 4 to 6 p.m. daily.

Adams said that if the station can raise the money to install the poles, which would be located south of the Carmel River on a hillside on the San Carlos Ranch property. music would be played 24 hours a day.

The wattage would also be boosted to 5,000 watts, he said.

Adams added that if the antennas are placed, the "pockets" where the reception is diminished would be filled. The actual boundaries of the station's broadcast would remain the same.

Another plus, if the money can be raised for the new antennas (which will be painted a dark color to blend in with the hillside), would be increased advertising, Adams said.

To gain input from the public about the project, Greg D'Ambrosio, director of administrative services, is conducting a meeting from 2 to 4 p.m., Wednesday, Dec. 28 to show three different plans for landscaping and design of the parking lot. Citizens are encouraged to attend.

Aspects of the project still under discussion include where the second mini-park should be located.

One will be on the northeast corner of the property, which has a spectacular panoramic view of Point Lobos, the city and the Pacific Ocean.

The city will tear down one shed that blocks the view and probably will use the remaining sheds on the property for city storage.

Seniors program needs participants

CARMEL POLICE Department's "Seniors Helping Seniors" program has need for two types of seniors: those who would like to help and those who desire

According to Cathy Dampier, desk officer, there are seniors who are looking for some type of community involvement to donate their time and others who are lonely, "shut-ins," or are "at-risk" due to medical or physical reasons and desire contact with someone who cares about their welfare.

In addition to daily phone calls to participants, home visitations, tea parties, and luncheons are scheduled to "further enhance and improve the quality of our contacts" with those who are shut-ins or at-risk, Dampier said.

Anyone interested in becoming a volunteer or a recipient of the "Seniors Helping Seniors' program is encouraged to call the Carmel Police Department at 624-6403.

Last-minute gift ideas

By Linda G. Horning

OKAY, THERE are only two or three more days until Christmas. Call me pushy, but isn't it time to start your Christmas shopping? And since you waited until the last minute, it's not going to be easy, but as one of Santa's helpers, I'll try to give you some guidance. (First suggestion: next year, start earlier!)

In past columns, I've featured businesses offering auto detailing (Waxing Elegant), local custom laser design and leather goods (Laser Creations in Sand City, with products available at Laser Creations on Cannery Row; Davidson Mann & Co. with products available at Stefan Mann in Carmel), and gently worn items (at Patrick's Resale furniture in Pacific Grove, at Labels—designer clothing and accessories—in Grand Central Station in Pacific Grove, and at numerous non-profit benefit and other shops throughout the peninsula). Someone, if not everyone, on your shopping list would surely appreciate a gift from or a gift certificate redeemable at, any one of these fine establishments.

Gift certificates from a local book store should also please many on your list, while possibly making you appear a genuine hero who put great thought and effort into the perfect gift. Book stores generally carry a variety of other popular items, i.e. cassette tapes, stationery, book-ends, calendars and other gifts. And if all of this last-minute shopping is just wearing your poor little self out, Blake's Bookshop at the Crossroads has a cozy sitting room complete with fireplace, where you can relax and browse through books you hope Santa will deliver to you. (Maybe if you're good, you'll receive a book store gift certificate!)

For out-of-town recipients, let's face it—chances are very slim that your gift will arrive before Christmas anyway, so you may as well make up for your tardiness by sending something that is unique, of high quality, and is reminiscent of the peninsula. Local wine from Ventana Vineyards qualifies; they're open from 12 to 5 through the 24th and will handle shipping arrangements for your gift packs. There are a number of local wineries you may wish to visit, but you'd better hurry if you want Chateau Julien wine. They will be closed the Friday before through the Monday after Christmas.

The Tuck Box on Dolores in Carmel will also ship your gift pack, which I believe would be incomplete without including one of their "own-made" jam varieties, especially the Tuck Box version of olallieberry (yeah? Same to you!).

Another gift with local flavor, and so easy to mail, is the Carmel-by-the-Bates Carmel cartoon book (by Bill Bates, if that wasn't obvious). Ordering information is located on page 57 of a book entitled, Buying the Best (Carmel/Pebble Beach Edition), which is yet another fabrilous, easy-to-mail gift idea, which you can purchase while you're shopping at Blake's Bookshop! It's also available in local gift shops, newsstands, or through the Carmel Pine Cone.

There are so many unique shops, services and restaurants on the peninsula, I'm sure you'll find the ones which exactly fit the needs and personalities of those on your Christmas shopping list. And don't forget, gift certificates also make great stocking-stuffers!

Happy Holidays; see you next year!

Collect and learn to identify natural sources of colors for dying fabric, such as mustard flowers, oak galls and sea hare ink. The workshop is set 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 7 at the Elkhorn Slough National Estuarine Research Reserve.

Participants will prepare different dyes and dye wool yarn fibers. In addition, the natural history of Elkhorn Slough will be discussed. Take home a sample book with four to six dyed fibers and the skills to do this on your own.

The fee, which includes materials, is $20 for foundation members and $25 for non-members. The sanctuary is at 1700 Elkhorn Road, approximately four miles east of Moss Landing. For reservations and registration, call 728-2822.

There's only one way to come out ahead of the pack.

REP. LEON Panetta has been named chairman of the powerful House Budget Committee, the committee that has the unenviable task of taking on the nation's ever-deepening national debt.

Rep. Leon Panetta chairs House Budget Committee

REP. LEON E. Panetta of Carmel Valley was elected by House Democrats as chairman of the House Budget Committee.

Panetta was unopposed for the job. He was a member of the Budget Committee from 1979 to 1984 and Chairman of its Task Forces on Legislative Savings/Reconciliation and Budget Process. He has served since 1985 as a deputy whip in the House on budget matters, and was a participant in the budget summit conference last fall.

"I am honored that my colleagues have chosen me for this difficult and challenging responsibility," Panetta said. "Reducing budget deficits and restoring our nation's financial resources must be the top priority for the new Congress and the new administration. The first test of leadership for both the president and Congress will be how effectively we respond to the budget challenge."

Panetta continued, "A nation's budget is more than numbers and dollar signs. It is the only document that sets out in concrete terms the nation's priorities for now and the future. A budget represents decisions about how to distribute our limited resources among the many national needs which compete for our attention. In making those tough choices, we decide, in a very real sense, what we stand for as a nation. I look forward to working with all of my colleagues, Democratic and Republican alike, as well as the administration, in that process."

Under the Congressional Budget Act, the budget committee draws up a federal budget each year which establishes binding spending and revenue targets for every government function for the coming fiscal year. This occurs after the president submits his own budget to Congress.

The budget resolution approved by the committee must be adopted by the House and Senate. The committee is then responsible for monitoring and enforcing the spending and revenue targets as well as Congressional efforts to reduce the deficit.

Panetta, 50, was first elected to Congress from California's central coast in 1976. He will begin his seventh term in January.

He has chaired the House Agriculture Committee's Subcommittee on Domestic Marketing, Consumer Relations, and Nutrition since 1983 and is the author of the Hunger Prevention Act of 1988 and several other initiatives approved by Congress to combat hunger.

He has also headed the House Administration Committee's Subcommittee on Personnel and Police since 1985. He wrote the landmark measure passed by the House this year to provide civil rights protections to all House employees for the first time in history.

Panetta was a Senate aide in the mid-1960s before serving as director of the Office of Civil Rights in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare from 1969 to 1970. He then worked for a year as executive assistant to the mayor of New York City before returning to Monterey, where he practiced law until his election to Congress.

Panetta was born and raised in Monterey and resides in Carmel Valley. He received his bachelor's and law degrees from the University of Santa Clara and served in the Army from 1964 to 1966.

He and his wife, Sylvia, have three sons.

Water board head favors more rationing if no rain

By NANCY HILLS

NICK LOMBARDO, chairman of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board, says he believes the board should keep rationing in place until the area's aquifers are full and the Carmel River is running again.

Faced with a water system that is about 50 percent of capacity and little or no rain for the first few months of this water year (which

'My personal position and recommendation to the board is that Phase III stay in effect until the aquifers are full. That includes the Seaside and Carmel Valley aquifers and for that type of recovery we would have to have substantive rainfall.'

— Nick Lombardo— Water board chairman began Oct. 1), the board reluctantly approved a 20-percent cutback.

It is the first mandatory rationing on the peninsula since 1977.

The water board declared that water rationing will begin Jan. 1 for the peninsula, requiring a 20-percent reduction in water use on all meters except for hospitals, nursing homes, commercial laundries and laudromats.

If rain is below normal or produces little runoff, the board may have to declare a stricter rationing phase.

"My personal position and recommendation to the board is that Phase III stay in effect until the aquifers are full. That includes the Seaside and Carmel Valley aquifers and for that type of recovery we would have to have substantive rainfall," Lombardo said.

Some people believe that once the rain starts to fall, the board will lift rationing, but that's not be the course the district should take, he said. Additionally, the board may have to institute even stricter measures.

"If we have substantually less rain — on the lower end of the average — we will have to go to Phase IV," Lombardo said.

The staff is currently working on the specifics of that phase, along with the Urban Conservation Committee and Demand Management Committee, Lombardo explained.

He expects that Phase IV provisions will be completed by April 1, though how much of a reduction Phase IV will be is still undecided, he added. Originally, it was a 40-percent cut, but it could be more severe depending upon existing conditions.

Lombardo explained that for Phase IV, he personally supports a water meter permit moratorium, a condition that is not currently a part of Phase III.

When setting out the provisions of Phase III, Lombardo said, "we had one goal in mind — how to get us through this and dole out the water in some type of fair and equitable basis. We should have rather concise and thorough understanding of our options in Phase IV," Lombardo said.

Historically, he added, the months that fill the aquifer are in January, February and March and he wants to wait until we see what happens before going to Phase IV.

"People do not realize we are not in a heavy growth period. People who earn their money in construction, who strap on that carpenter belt, those who make the cement," need the money that comes through the "limited growth" currently going on.

"The construction trade itself uses little water," Lombardo said, and the amount "added on" by the new connections to current use is "not that much."

"I appreciate people's concern on a personal level, but we would also appreciate them sharing some of that water they saved with other segments of the community," Lombardo said.

During Phase IV, while he would be in favor of a new-connection moratorium, he would also be in favor of remodeling activity that reduces water consumption or does not use additional water.

"If it is a provable reduction," he added. In answer to some people's concern that the water board started rationing too late, Lombardo replied, "I don't feel we waited too long. We wanted to see what type of rainfall we would get. If we got the average rainfall in October and November, we would not have put Phase III in at all.

"The district really went into a form of rationing also with the distribution of the conservation kits," Lombardo said.

Lombardo, whose water use on Rancho

Canada Golf Club's two courses has generated controversy, could be in for more of the same because he leases land for his Laguna Seca golf course which is in a section along Highway 68 that will not be rationed.

The corridor along Highway 68 includes Laguna Seca Raceway, Ryan Ranch and Monterey Research Park, which draws its water from a separate aquifer from those drawn on by California-American Water Co.

The board voted unanimously to exclude that portion of the district from rationing based on water studies recently done by the district and its consultants Staal, Gardner and Dunne.

Lombardo said that the water district staff had recommended that the corridor not be rationed because the aquifer was not as affected by the drought as the other parts of the water system.

The Hidden Hills area is also excluded from the mandatory rationing because it uses a separate source of water.

Residents asked to dispose of yard debris properly

CARMEL PUBLIC Works Department reminds residents to not such a storm, there are substantial accumulationms of pine needles, leaves, and twigs on residents' property and street rights-of-way immediately adjacent to private property."

Cullem advises residents to clean up yard debris by placing it in lawn bags to be held for pickup by the John Roscelli Corp. for the next scheduled quarterly bulk pickup at the end of December.

"Our street sweeper is unable to pick up piles of debris and branches jam the vacuum tube," he said. "Also debris that is swept into the streets can clog the storm drain culverts at the street intersections and cause serious flooding problems.

Will the real Santa Claus please stand up?

By MAC McDONALD

QUICK, WHAT'S a holiday party without Santa? Easy, a revel without a Claus.

OK, quit your moaning; blame that one on Herb Caen. But you may be somewhat surprised to learn that Christmas revels used to be celebrated without a Claus less than 200 years ago in America.

So in view of the long-held religious nature of Christmas as it relates to the birth of the Christ child, the figure of roly-poly Santa is relatively new, and as it turns out, as American as baseball, apple pie, or Rambo for that matter.

Santa Claus, as you may have found it hard to avoid, is the most visible symbol of Christmas and the general merrymaking and spirit of gift-giving that prevails during the month of December. Who can resist smiling when confronted with the familiar figure of the jolly old fat man with the ruddy cheeks, clouds of white whiskers, bright red suit and a hearty "ho-ho-ho" that's as recognizable as the Jolly Green Giant's, if a trifle less hard on the ears.

Much like America itself, Santa and Christmas are results of a hodgepodge of Eastern European culture, old wive's tales, ancient traditions, fairy tales, religious customs and mythic legends.

Author John Ciardi once described

Christmas as we now know it as "what happened when the Christian Feast of the Nativity collided with the ancient Teutonic Yule." And laser-blasted by ninja turtles and charmed by Barbie dolls these days no doubt.

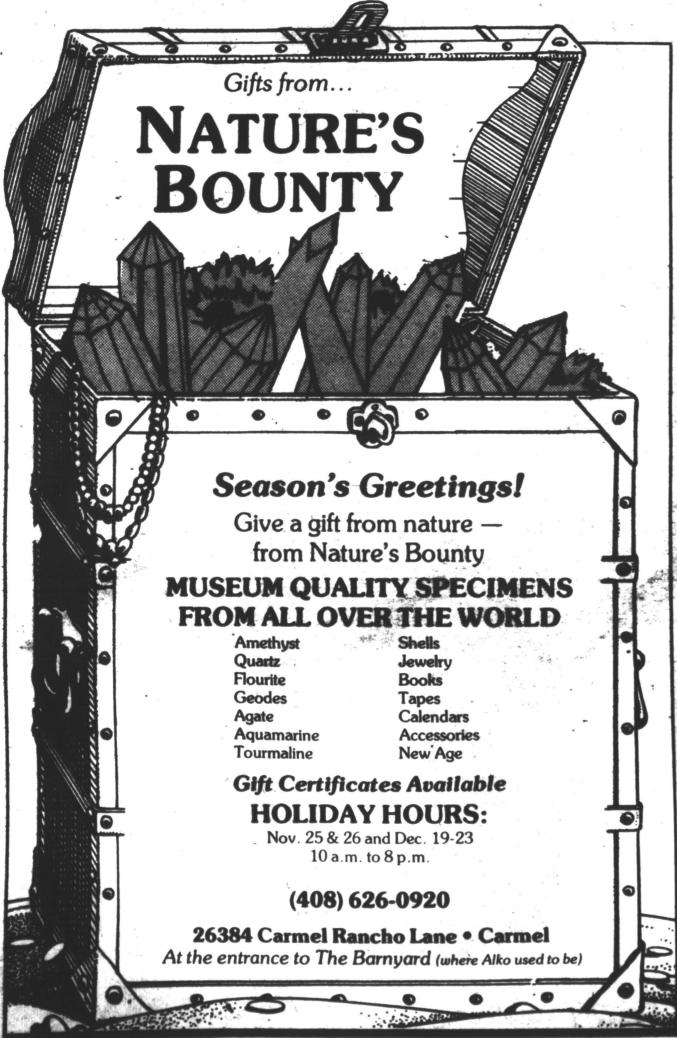

Christmas, in the traditional sense, of course, is the celebration of the birth of Christ. But Santa Claus? Where did this guy come from? And if you said the North Pole. I have some nice frozen tundra for sale.

THERE ACTUALLY was a Saint Nicholas, by the way. He was one of the major saints of Roman Catholicism, a fourth century bishop of Myra in Asia Minor. He was the patron saint of gift-giving, among other things, and was thought to be the savior of young maidens and students, which we shall examine a little later.

St. Nicholas' legend somehow made its way to the Netherlands, where he was called "Sint Nikolaas," which was later shortened to "Sinter Klaas," when Dutch immigrants settled in New Amsterdam, later to be shortened to New York. A good thing, too. "I Love New Amsterdam," and the "New Amsterdam Yankees" just don't have the same ring to them.

Are you stil with me on this? Good. It gets better. To see for yourself how St. Nicholas eventually became Santa Claus, try saying "Saint Nicholas" five times very fast and you'll get the picture.

"Big deal," you may be saying at this point. "So there's a connection between St. Nick and Santa Claus. So where do the other Christmas traditions come from, a bunch of overactive elves with time on their little hands?

Well, hold on to your stocking cap. The Dutch celebrated the arrival of St. Nicholas on Dec. 6 by placing their wooden shoes by the fireplace and leaving hay for his horse. You see, back in those days St. Nick was a bishop who rode a white horse and carried a purse of money in one hand for the good little children and a birch rod in the other for the naughty ones. Bad boys and girls just didn't get off with a lump of coal in their stockings in those days.

Meanwhile, not to be left out of all the revelry, the Germans were celebrating their Yule (in Old Norse, "jul"), which was a two-week winter sun-worshippers festival following the winter solstice. Doesn't sound much different than what happens in Southern California every winter, does it?

Myth even has it that the Germans had their own version of Santa Claus, a jolly old boozer who danced from home to home in the dead of winter bumming food and drink wherever he could, surrounded by neighborhood urchins, who in turn bummed or snitched food from the tipsy old codger. Nothing says that Santa and his little elves had to be good little boys too.

This "Old Man of the Woods" became known around the eighth century as Kriss Kringle, a derivation of the German word "Christkindl," or the Little Christ Child. This gives further impetus to the "collision of cultures" description. The English, meanwhile, took the German festival and made it their 12 Days of Christmas, further adding to the cultural stew.

THE AMERICAN version of Santa Claus, however, even though a mixture of the aforementioned cultures, was crystallized in America's consciousness by Clement Clark

Moore's famous poem, written in 1822. It's the one that begins (everybody now), "'Twas the night before Christmas..."

Moore used the words "Santa Claus" and "St. Nicholas" interchangeably, even calling him "St. Nick," who was a "right jolly old elf." Moore's Santa was small and elfish and wore furs, which certainly would have helped him to get down chimneys easier, unlike our rotund version today. Moore's Santa also rode in a small sleigh pulled by reindeer that magically flew through the dark snowy skies. He used to be easier on the reindeer too.

Thomas Nast, the famous American illustrator and cartoonist, further solidified the image of Santa Claus with his drawings in the mid-1800s. Even though various images of Santa appeared in Moore's poem and Nast's drawings, it was the combination of the two that popularized the figure of Santa Claus as we know him today.

Santa has evolved very little since the mid-1800s, just getting a little heftier and jollier with age. Some of the customs surrounding his arrival every December can also be traced to one of his antecedents, the real St. Nicholas, the one on the white horse.

The leaving of a plate of cookies, cakes and beverage can be traced to the ancient custom of leaving hay for St. Nicholas' horse. The custom may also have its roots in

'Let Santa Claus be to succeeding generations as he has been to us: a joyous faith of childhood, a pleasant indulgence of parenthood, and a happy memory of old age.'

— Judge John H. Hatcher — 1927

the ritual begging of the Old Man of the Woods, although its doubtful he would've gone for milk and cookies. Lowenbrau and beer nuts, maybe.

The hanging of stockings above the fireplace can also be traced back to St. Nicholas.

As the legend goes, there was a poor man with three marriageable daughters, but no money for their dowries. St. Nick, hearing of the old man's plight, on successive nights stealthily threw into the house a bag filled with gold for each daughter. Thus they were all able to wed.

"A-ha," you say, alert as ever. "How did he throw the bags of gold into the house?" In those days houses did not have chimneys or fireplaces, but fire pits, with a railing around the pit and a hole in the roof to let out the smoke.

This, of course, eventually led to the story of Santa coming down the chimney to deliver gifts, but it also established the tradition of hanging Christmas stockings by the fireplace. You see, the three daughters would wash their stockings every night and set them on the rail to dry overnight. St. Nick, knowing this, stood outside the house and lobbed the gold bags into each stocking. This, of course, required some pretty fancy Larry Bird-like lobbing. But hey, why be a saint if you can't make the tough shots.?

ST. NICHOLAS is also said to have miraculously revived three students from the dead after an evil innkeeper had killed them, chopped them up and stuffed them into a vat of brine. It's a good thing no Christmas traditions were handed down from that hideous little episode.

So the legend and lore of Santa Claus continues, preserved in the most part, not in a vat of brine, but by generations of believers in centuries-old traditions and mirthful myths and the passing on of these stories to wide-eyed and excited children around the world.

Even so, the image of and stories of Santa Claus have been attacked and criticized by scoffers and disbelieving Scrooges, as among other things, anti-religious and a dangerous lie. But others have come to the aid of Santa and championed his cause.

One was Judge John H. Hatcher of the West Virginia Supreme Court, who said in 1927 to those wishing to be rid of the jolly old man:

"Let him be to succeeding generations as he has been to us: a joyous faith of childhood, a pleasant indulgence of parenthood, and a happy memory of old age."

A merry Christmas to all, and may all your yuletide revels have Clauses!

CARMELITES WITNESS REAL SHIP-WRECK

Last Sunday all roads led to the scene of the shipwreck, just off the Del Monte Properties Company land, four miles south of Carmel. Thousands of people witnessed the breaking up of the cargo—a million feet of pine lumber-practically all of which has now been washed ashore.

The wreck of the three-masted steam schooner Flavel, from Everett, Wash., to San Pedro, Calif., occurred at two o'clock Friday morning last. The crew of twenty-four and Captain H. Johnson and a stowaway were rescued by the tug Normandin of Monterey.

CITY TO FOLLOW VOLLMER'S IDEAS

Mayor Herbert Heron is pledged to carry out suggestions made by August Vollmer, outstanding police expert, regarding Carmel's police force—at least to the extent of hiring a professionally trained officer, establishing a night desk, and installing a radio.

Cost of this was placed by Heron at $135 per month for the officer to bring the force to five officers, and an $800 one-way radio.

PROBLEM OF PALOMA CREEK SCHOOL

STUDENTS DISCUSSED

The problem of getting eight children who live in the Paloma Creek area of Carmel Valley to school was discussed again at the last meeting of the Carmel Unified School District's Board. Two of the families who resided in the area have moved since the board voted not to provide transportation to their homes, eight miles beyond the last established stop at the Hastings Natural History Reservation. This decision was reached on October 27, and the children have not attended school since then.

SHALL NEW POST OFFICE BE DUBBED CARMEL?

A dispute over the name of a new post office has spawned an unexpected alliance of Carmel merchants and councilmen. The "strange bedfellows" apparently convinced a visiting postal operations manager to recommend clipping "Carmel" from the name proposed for the new office at the mouth of the Valley.

The building will probably be called simply, "United States Post Office."

J. Walter Lautenberger Jr., a postal operations manager from San Bruno, tried to convince an overflow City Hall audience of 150 Monday night that the only issue was the actual name to be placed on the outside of the new post office. Carmel addresses and postmarks would not change for those living in the unincorporated areas.

But an aroused audience wouldn't buy it. Banding together like longtime friends, were about 20 Carmel merchants and four members of the Carmel City Council. Businessmen claimed that spreading the name "Carmel" could decrease their sales volume. Councilmen objected to misuse and commercialization of the city's name.

CITY PANEL SPLIT ON SCENIC ROAD PLAN

The Carmel Beach Rehabilitation Task Force agrees that the city should construct a walkway along Scenic Road.

However, the consensus ends there as the committee is divided over traffic restrictions that would make a walkway feasible between Eighth and Santa Lucia avenues.

The committee originally was scheduled on Dec. 15 to discuss the long-delayed beach walkway plan and traffic restrictions along Scenic Road. But after a lengthy status report on the beach bank rehabilitation project, the committee adjourned with little discussion of the other two items.

Nominating

THE CARMEL Residents Association plans to start 1989 off on a positive note with the selection of a person to be honored as Citizen of the Year. Members of the Nominating Committee include (from left to right), Clayton Anderson, Linda Anderson, Peggy Purchase and Barbara Livingston. The organization is taking nominations for the new award and is looking for people who "during the past year or years have done an outstanding job of promoting the objective of ordinance 96." Ordinance 96 is the portion of the zoning code that states Carmel is "primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city." The full text hangs in Carmel City Council Chambers. The nominee can live in Carmel or within its sphere of influence. Nominees will also be judged by whether their activities conform to CRA's objectives. The winner of the award will be annouced at a party from 3 to 5 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 22 at the Carmel Scout House. Tickets are $5 per person and the proceeds will be used to offset the cost of the party and winner's plaque. Nomination should be submitted by Jan. 5 to Citizen of the Year Selection Committee, P.O. Box 13, Carmel, CA 93921. (Nancy Hills photo.)

At the annual meeting, attended by 175 members and guests and held at the Golf Club at Quail Lodge, the following officers of Monterey County Sheriff's Advisory Committee were elected for the year 1988-89: Sheriff Bud Cook, chairman; Edgar H. Haber, president; Jim Dagdigian, vice president; J. Breck Tostevin, treasurer; Tony Lombardo, secretary and counsel; David Armanasco; Gary Koeppel; Paul Laub; Bob Palmer; Bill Stevens.

Its purpose is to assist the sheriff in fulfilling the duties and responsibilities of the office as he may request from time to time, and to provide a civilian group to help in any way they can to make the Sheriff's Department more effective, as well as raising funds for law enforcement items that are not available through the Sheriff's budget.

At the annual meeting, it was announced that the group had raised more than $36,000 to date, and has purchased such items as hostage radio telephone systems, surveillance gear, video cameras, automatic target equipment, dirt bikes for offroad law enforcement needs, and hands-free microphones for two-way radios. This sheriff's group also gives awards to outstanding students in law enforcement schools, as well as funding various youth organizations.

Bank of America will team up with the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve to support the annual Toys for Tots campaign. As an official sponsor of the Marine Corps' 41st annual program, the bank will open its 850 branches as collection sites for toys, ensuring that thousands of needy youngsters will not be disappointed on Christmas morning.

Toys, which must be new and not gift-wrapped, may be donated at any Bank of America branch. Just before Christmas 23 USMC Reserve units in the state will make the final pick-up.

"Bank of America is proud to participate in this outstanding program which brings joy to millions of needy children," said Joan Salinas, manager of the Pacific Grove branch. "We hope to encourage large numbers of people to join in the spirit of giving, and have provided convenient dropoff sites for their toy contributions."

STUDENTS URGED TO APPLY FOR PRIVATE GRANTS, SCHOLARSHIPS

Graduate, undergraduate, and college-bound students in need of supplemental funding for college are urged to write to the Scholarship Bank for information on private scholarship sources.

The Scholarship Bank is a non-profit foundation which works with private foundations, the U.S. Department of Education, and finanacial aid offices to assure that high school and college students already attending college receive information on private aid sources. Funds are normally awarded on such bases as academic standing, major, financial need, and even on a student's willingness to consider a special research project.

It is estimated that over 500 million dollars in private aid money will be distributed next year, or roughly one-fourth of all available aid. Funds for undergraduate students range from $1,000 to $20,000 per student, with most scholarships renewable yearly. Graduate level grants are also available with values up to $25,000.

LOCAL HEART ASSOCIATION URGES CAUTION WITH DONATIONS TO UNFAMILIAR NONPROFITS

The local American Heart Association urges Central Coast residents to be cautious when responding to mail requests for donations from unfamiliar, nonprofit organizations.

"We recently received a number of phone calls about an agency called American Heart Disease Prevention Foundation," says Dr. James Egan, local American Heart Association president. This agency mailed a letter to local residents announcing a $5,000 cash giveaway. "I would like to emphasize that there is no relationship between the American Heart Association and other fund-raising groups with similar sounding names," Dr Egan said. This company even mentions the American Heart Association's name in its fund-raising letter.

"The American Heart Association has no desire to stifle competition or harm any legitimate not-for-profit agency raising funds for cardiovascular research," Dr. Egan said. "But we are concerned that the public may misunderstand the differences between the American Heart Association's mission and the goals of organizations with similar sounding names."

According to the National Council of Better Business Bureaus, although sweepstakes letters indicate "You're a Winner," you probaby have not won the grand prize.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT

By D. Patrick Gallagher

Good sports

It's Monday night and Seattle is making short work of the Raiders in a game that is important to both football teams trying to win their division title. Al Michaels, the play-by-play man for ABC's triumvirate of announcers—the others are Frank Gifford and Dan Dierdorf), is wrapping up a Seattle play. "Well," Al says, "that takes them to the 50-yard line, which puts them at mid-field." There's not much that escapes Al's keen sense of observation.

Frank Gifford is the gentleman of the crew. He reminds us of Mike Dukakis without the excitement. Frank has never blamed a bad game on any player or coach. I'm sure he thinks the major cause of forest fires is trees. Maybe he's right; President Reagan blamed them for pollution.

Dan Dierdorf brings life to the show. Dierdorf, who once played for a team which is no longer in St. Louis (idea for a new NFL quiz show: "Guess where your team plays next year?"), sounds like a bomb waiting to explode. His comments are often borderline-offensive to the powers that be and, week after week, I keep waiting for him to blow it (no pun intended).

Actually, they are one of the better announcing teams in professional football. It has to be difficult to sit up there in those cramped booths and keep the chatter going for three hours without saying some inane things. If they weren't paid so well, I'd feel sorry for them. Fortunately, most sports personalities are people who can perform a verbal lobotomy on the language and make us smile when they do it. In fact, proper English might rob many sports related comments of their poignancy.

Just before takeoff on a commercial airliner, heavyweight champion Muhammed Ali was reminded by a stewardess to fasten his seat belt. "Superman don't need no seat belt," replied Ali. "Superman don't need no airplane, either," retorted the stewardess. Ali fastened his seat belt.

The Los Angeles Rams, the NFL's answer to the sledge hammer, have been coached for years by men who prefer the running game of football to the passing game. Joe Namath was asked, in the year he quarterbacked the Rams, how they selected so many good running backs? Namath said that the Rams put all the applicants for those positions in a corral with bulls and let them butt heads until only one was left standing, and that was the one they signed. "Ain't seen no bulls show up for practice yet," Joe observed. Joe Namath is a well educated graduate of the University of Alabama, but that particular ungrammatical structure might be considered appropriate to the story.

Yogi Berra has left us with no end of ungrammatical, but quotable, comments. Talking about a lack of fans when the Yankees were losing, he said "If the fans don't want to come out here, nobody's gonna stop them." Taken to a famous restaurant of which he had never heard, Yogi looked around the packed and busy place and observed, "No wonder nobody comes here—it's too crowded."

Dizzy Dean explained the professional athlete's proclivity for the word ain't when he was accused of corrupting the English language with his unruly diction and grammar. "A lot of people who don't say ain't ain't eatin'," he replied.

That example is, perhaps, why Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard for 40 years (1869-1909), expressed frequent misgivings about sports at the college. He considered one year dropping baseball because, "I'm told the team did well due to one pitcher's fine curveball. I'm told that a curveball is thrown with a deliberate attempt to deceive. Surely that is not an ability we should like to foster at Harvard." Times change.

Hank Aaron, who played for the Milwaukee (and later, Atlanta) Braves and broke Babe Ruth's all time home-run record (Aaron hit 755 in all), approached the subject of education differently. During the 1957 World Series, Yankee catcher Yogi Berra noticed that Aaron grasped the bat the wrong way. "Turn it around," he said, "so you can see the trademark." Aaron never flinched, keeping his eye on the pitcher's mound. "Didn't come up here to read," he said. "Came up here to hit."

I enjoy watching football and basketball, but I must admit to being a less than avid baseball fan. No offense intended, but I'd rather watch paint dry.

Today, most professional athletes are well educated. Another Ram quarterback, Pat Haden, is an exceptional example having graduated Phi Beta Kappa, a Rhodes Scholar to Oxford University, and a law school graduate from USC.

In football, even I am reasonably well educated. Monday night Tim Brown, the ex-Notre Damer and Raiders punt return man, ran back punts of 42, 38, and 27 yards. That, I believe, is called the Law of Diminishing Returns. I also know why those Ram coaches prefer the running game. When you throw the ball three things can happen, and two of them are bad. I also know it is bad luck to be behind at the end of the game or to have to explain my opening comments in this column to guys the size of Gifford or Dierdorf.

Setting the record straight

A FEW weeks ago I touted Emma Tropia Optical Boutique's contribution to the peninsula personalized sunglass frames.

If you'll remember, that's the store that saves people a trip to LA or San Francisco, and generates state-of-the-art frames in 24 hours, in most cases: a second of the highest and the least

But there needs to be a little clarifying regarding the Carmel Rancho Lane boutique: while it is owned by peninsula opthalmologist Dr. Theresa De Barros, who conducts eye exams in her Monterey office, Emma Tropia does not provide ca' there keep Berry not can that Autot

De Barros emphasizes that when local customers choose a frame, they may return to their opthalmologist for the lens prescription.

You only have until Wednesday, Dec. 21 to donate.

In its sixth year, the program utilizes nine banks to serve as collection points for gift donations. The project is being coordinated by the Carmel Board of Realtors.

Here's how it works: next to the Christmas trees set up by each participating bank and savings and loan firm is a gaily decorated basket containing peppermint candy canes.

Customers are asked to choose one of the canes. On each cane is a tag suggesting a modest gift to be purchased, wrapped, and left at the bank or S&L for pickup by Wednesday, Dec. 21.

The nine firms taking part in the program are: Security Pacific, Pacific Western Bank, Great Western Bank, Monterey Savings and First Interstate Bank. Some are using several branches, hence the number nine.

New ad agency...RL Richmond & Associates, a fully equipped architectural and interior design company, has created "Signatures Ltd."

"The company performs the functions of developing image, logos, business cards, letterheads, site signs, as well as television, newspaper and radio ads," says owner Lisa Richmond, who adds that the company offers a "personal touch" in advertising.

Next year, Lisa has plans to start up a clothing design company. She can be reached at 647-2277.

Speaking of Carmel realtors...The Carmel Board of Realtors hase pledged increased involvement in community service projects during the coming year.

"The community gives a lot to us realtors and it's only right that we give back what we receive," says newly installed president Annis Lembo. "As much as anybody, we are part and parcel of the community, and we take intense interest in its welfare."

While it is unclear what new projects the board will step into, they now participate in Christmas CanTree, Christmas Candy Cane, a scholarship program for Carmel High School

Lucky bounce

Q. ON Saturday evening my wife and I were returning home from dining out. I stopped at a stop sign and waited because I saw the headlights of an approaching car. A car behind me blew his horn repeatedly and actually rammed into my rear bumper. I finally was able to enter the highway and, as I did, a small sports car containing two men and a woman zoomed by and the man on the passenger side threw out a beer bottle. Fortunately the bottle hit the hood of my car and bounced over the windshield. I had to pull over and stop for five minutes for us to regain our composure. Unfortunately, I did not get the license number or a good description of the other car or its occupants.

Having had several days to think about it, one question repeatedly comes to mind. Why are beer commercials, particularly those using athletes and other role models, allowed on TV when we have banned liquor and cigarette ads?

LC, Prunedale

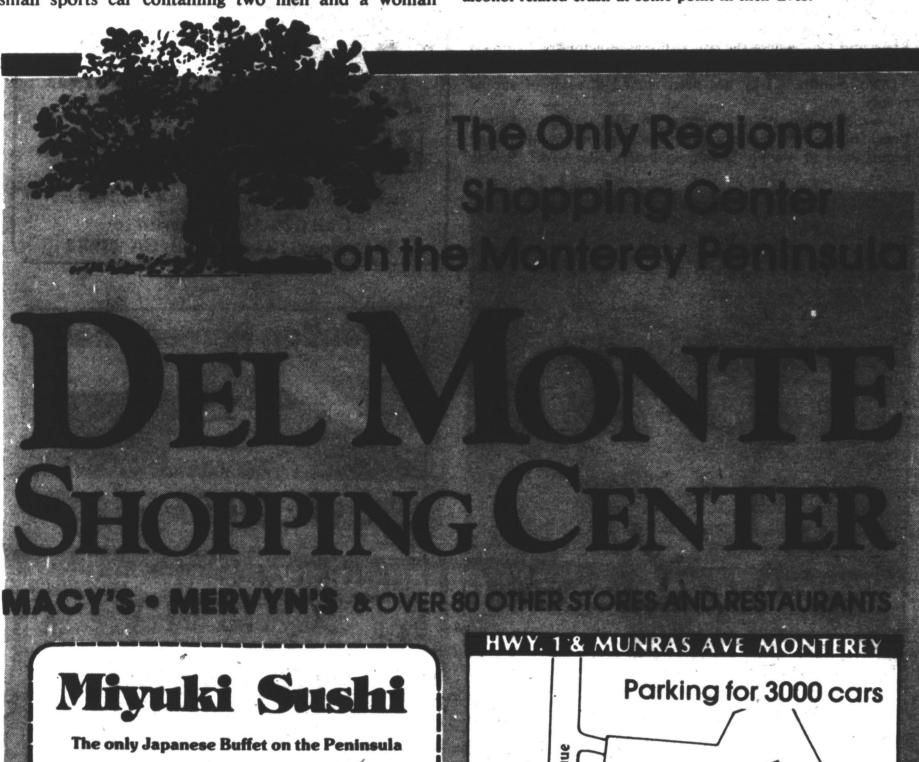

A. I have two answers to your question. Lobbyists and PACs. The December issue of Retirement Life had this info. Drunk driving is the most frequently committed crime in the nation today. DWI arrests in 1986 totalled more than three times the total for all other violent crimes (murder, robbery, forcible rape, and aggravated assault). On an average weekend night, one out of every 10 drivers is legally impaired or drunk in some parts of the nation. Estimates of the economic cost of drunk driving have been as high as $24 billion. (All-state 1982.) Two out of every five Americans will be involved in an alcohol-related crash at some point in their lives.

Q. MY husband, who is 60 years old, recently began receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits because of lung and liver conditions. Now Social Security says he has to take a course of treatment for alcoholism. How come?

TD, Greenfield

A. A person whose disability is aggravated by drug abuse or alcoholism must accept appropriate treatment for the condition in order to be elibible for SSI payments according to Teryl Burke, Social Security district manager in Salinas. Drug abuse or alcoholism, itself, is not a basis for a finding of disability under SSI. Such a determination must be based on symptoms, signs, and laboratory findings. If drug addiction or alcoholism is found to contribute to the disability, a referral is made to a state agency so that appropriate treatment may be arranged. Failure to follow the prescribed course of treatment may result in suspension of payments.

arts agencies nationwide to receive a 1989 Planning and Administration Grant through the NEA's Local Programs

The Monterey County Cultural Council's grant was awarded to support a new full-time staff position, titled education coordinator. Under the guidance of the Cultural Council's executive director, the education coordinator will administer the Council's Professional Artists in Schools (PAS) Program, as well as determine the wisest systematic expansion of the program countywide.

"This grant comes at a crucial time for the PAS Program," said Gary Smith, chair of the PAS Committee. "Our pilot PAS Program last spring was extremely successful. We have hired additional artists and expanded in the Salinas-area elementary schools this fall, but without a full-time coordinator the program cannot grow throughout the county. PAS requires a tremendous number of administrative hours."

This fall, the Professional Artists in Schools Program is providing public elementary classes with a variety of arts projects taught by some of Monterey County's most respected artists. The cultural council presents classroom teachers with a catalogue, from which they may order projects like Traditional African Textile Designs, Early American Folk Arts, Working with Clay, Fiber Weaving, Video Production,

The cultural council has raised funds to support this program through private donations and grants. MCCC is in the process of conducting an end-of-the-year fundraising campaign, in part to match the NEA grant for the education coordinator.

At Wayne State University in Detroit, research is focusing on fruit flies ideal subjects because they have few genes and their short lifespan allows study of many generations in a relatively short time. So far the research has produced fruitfly strains with greatly enhanced lifespans.

'Child Star' author meets a crowd in Carme

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE LINE snakes out of sight as the inquisitive and acquisitive gather to greet a screen legend who launched her career 57 years ago.

Shirley Temple Black takes her place at a table in Books, Inc. on Ocean Avenue, vital. cheerful and several minutes early. Her hair and eyes are a matching shade of brown and her spike heels mirror the bright red of her

"I feel like Santa Claus today. I like red all

'My interest is in international relations. Serving in Ghana was the best job of my life. I'd be honored to serve again in any capacity.

author of Child Star, the number three book on the New York Times bestseller list, and "the book for Christmas, a phenomenal best-seller," according to a representative from the publisher, McGraw-Hill.

It's something of a mob scene in the Carmel store. But the crowd defies pigeonholing. There are young children leading their parents by the hand. There are people who appear to be much older than the author's 60 years. The unifying theme in this swell of humanity is the black and white image of an unsmiling, ringletted child, the cover photograph on the autobiography that is carried by the patient visitors to Books, Inc. this Saturday morning.

"Where are people parking today, that's what I want to know?" Black inquires. "In Pacific Grove?"

If Shirley Temple Black has anything better to do at the moment, she's not letting on. This dancing-eyed grandmother who celebrated her 38th wedding anniversary the previous day appears to be having a whale of a time. To each person she bestows a direct smile and a carefully penned autograph in Child Star. For many, she has questions.

"Are they going to add to the freeway in Carmel? I don't think I like the bypass idea," she notes to City Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo and her husband Barney.

the year 'round, frankly,' exclaims the A regular visitor to the peninsula, she married Charles A. Black in 1950 at his parent's vacation home off Aguajito Road in the hills above Monterey.

> "We were married in the living room in front of the fireplace. It was a foggy day," she recalls.

Video monitors installed in the store echo her image. Skipping across the screens in glorious black and white is vintage Shirley, the child who saved her studio from bankruptcy and outdrew them all — Gable, Crawford, Garbo et al., in Hollywood's Golden Age.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt said of her, "It is a splendid thing that for just 15 cents, an American can go to a movie and look at the smiling face of a baby and forget his troubles."

Black chronicles her career in a book that is unsparing in its revelations. The world's number one box office attraction was the object of death threats and kidnap attempts. The studio that she saved from financial disaster paid her far less than her actual worth. And the millions she did earn were squandered through mismanagement.

"For years Father had flagrantly disobeyed the Superior Court order," Black writes. "Commencing in 1942 he simply ceased depositing anything to my trust."

Yet hers is not a dark story. The brightness that she exhibited as a child memorizing dialogue and dance routines is coupled with unwavering level-headedness. Many child actors, their careers dissolved with the onset of puberty, never found their way as adults. But Black survived and thrived. Her first marriage at 17 ended in divorce, but she went on to enter a successful second marriage and cultivate a new career as diplomat and stateswoman.

Her lengthy resume mentions her posts as the U.S. ambassador to the Republic of Ghana and U.S. representative to the United Nations.

"My interest is in international relations," she explains. "Serving in Ghana was the best job of my life. I'd be honored to serve again in any capacity."

"HERS IS one of the lesser-edited books," observes Frank Goodall, western regional manager for McGraw-Hill. "She was very particular when she wrote and edited it. She installed a fax machine in her home, and did most of the work herself."

Carmel is Black's 21st stop on a national tour where, at each location, she has been met by equally diverse crowds.

"Aren't we going to have a cryer today?" she asks, playfully. "There was a woman in New York who cried for half an hour. Someone else started crying so I just put them together."

"I have a whole collection of your blue glass," volunteers an enthusiast, referring to one of the Temple tie-in products that sold millions in the '30s. Newspaper columnist Herb Caen says he mixes his martinis in a Shirley Temple cobalt blue pitcher, the formula being "gin to the chin, vermouth to the tooth."

Black describes her childhood self as a little tomboy who preferred mud pies and a rubber knife to dolls. But the studio launched an item that Shirley was starting a doll collection, and she was soon awash in a sea of beribboned darlings. And the dolls that bear her image sold in the thousands, both the licensed and unlicensed versions. It's enough to turn a child's head.

"I don't think I've ever been tired my whole life," quips Black, an amethyst ring twinkling as she signs yet another book.

"I've signed about 17,000 of these so far." Her energy should come in handy. Besides book parties where four generations often turn out to see her, Black will serve as grand marshall of the next Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena. It's actually a repeat performance for her - she previously headed the parade 50 years ago. And her publishers want her to pen the second installment of her autobiography. Child Star concludes with Black's achievements only up to 1954.

With a note of seriousness, she adds, "I believe in the work ethic."

HUNDREDS OF fans of assorted ages assembled at Books, Inc. in Carmel on Saturday, Dec. 17, to meet Shirley Temple Black. The film actress-turned-stateswoman autographed hundreds of copies of her best-selling autobiography. Child Star. The previous day she celebrated the 38th anniversary of her wedding to Charles A. Black, whom she married at his parents' vacation home off Aguajito Road. She has been a regular visitor to Carmel ever since. (Mac McDonald photo).

Holiday ham

HAM SALAD is a treat almost impossible to find on the West Coast, although it's a standard item in every New York and Boston delicatessen, right alongside the chicken and tuna salad. We were startled to find it on the menu at the new Walt's Deli on the basement level of Ford's Department Store in PG, and ordered a ham salad sandwich with some trepidation. Would it be good?

You bet it was. This is the real McCoy, ham salad like mother used to make, with just enough mayonnaise, pickle and tangy spices, and nicely heaped on rye bread for $3.25. Walt's is heavily into the ham business, bringing us country style hickory smoked honey-baked hams from the famous Meier Family in Omaha, Neb.

You can order these beauties by the half or whole ham, at $4.39 a pound, or in any quantity you please. It certainly takes the work out of feeding your guests since they come fully cooked and need only oven-warming. The deli even sells ham bones for your soup (or your doggie) at $2 each. This is some tasty porker paradise.

The deli has changed hands several times since Holman's became Ford's and we wish new owner Walt Tanous the best of luck with this fresh approach. He also stocks pates, caviar, that wonderful LaVosh cracker bread used in making rolled sandwiches and other such delicacies, and offers a full line of soups and sandwiches for informal lunching.

Walt's isn't the only food available in Ford's, of course. It's worth noting that Steve and Nico Bischoff have done a wonderful job with the penthouse Cafe Belvedere restaurant, which has possibly the greatest panoramic view of Monterey Bay in town.

FOR THE record, Walt's doesn't have the only ham salad in town, either, but the competition is minimal. Red's Donut Shop on Alvarado Street in downtown Monterey has a ham salad sandwich special for $2.25, but it's not always available.

Seems about once a month the Ham Salad Lady gets in the mood and makes a batch, but you gotta be on the lookout...

HAPPY HOLIDAYS to all you wunnerful Bay Lights readers and thanks for your postcards and notes telling us your favorite local restaurant and what you like about it. The Great Giveaway continues this week with new winner Laura Bayless of Carmel Valley, who writes:

"The artful artichoke, inventive appetizers, fresh fish grilled over mesquite, solicitous but unobtrusive service, delicious drinks, and those huge strawberries dipped in white chocolate. Mmm—the Whaling Station Inn, of course, of course."

Laura was one of three people who named the Whaling Station Inn, the only restaurant to generate more than one postcard. Must be a great place to eat. Anyway she's the winner by luck of the draw, and gets the Dream Date for two in Monterey, including two passes to the Dream Theater, the area's finest movie palace, and cheesecake dessert course with beverages for two at the Elegant Lady Cheesecake Parlor restaurant, 514 Lighthouse Ave., now open serving lunch and dinner til 4 a.m. (Right.)

You still have time to send us a card and get in on this fun. Next issue we're going to draw the winner of the Grand Prize, which is dinner for two plus the dazzling "Monterey by Night" cabaret show at La Provence restaurant in the American Tin Cannery. The show goes on every Sunday night (except Christmas and New Year's day), until Mardi Gras with the DiFranco Dancers kicking up a Parisian storm and cuisine tres Provencal.

Merci beaucoup to chef/owner Pierre Coutou for providing this splendid prize which includes the dinners and show; wine, tax, and tip are extra. He's also just opened the new Le Cafe de La Provence, an informal lunch spot in the mall. Mail your card to Bay Lights, Box G-1, Carmel 93921 and be merry...

BUCHES DE NOEL: Wonderful Larry Miller of Seaside is trying to wind up his year-long campaign to collect a ton of pennies for the Monterey County AIDS Project. If you've got a stash of those worthless coppers around the house, call Larry at 394-8018 and he'll come and pick them up. Your pennies can help someone in need and by the way a ton of them comes to around $3,000....

Animal rights activists in Rockville, Md. raised $240 to buy seven live lobsters from a restaurant and fly them to Portland, Me., where they were released into the ocean. The Coast Guard helped out and restaurant owner Jack Sun agreed to get rid of his lobster tank and is it Christmas yet?...

Big congrats to Carmel Valley poet Don Marsh who's just been nominated for the prestigious Pushcart Prize. His lengthy poem, "An Ice Cream Communion," appears in the current issue of Coydog Review literary magazine, available at better bookstores...

ADD BOOK news, photographer and writer Ted Orland signed copies of his new book, Scenes of Wonder & Curiosity, published by the elegant David R. Godine, Inc., at a Dec. 10 party at Maria Lindley's house on Yankee Point Drive in the Highlands. We love Orland's photo of Ansel Adams photographing a class of elementary school kids, titled "Even Ansel Had to Make a Living"...

Laura Crugnale has been named the new director of sales and catering at La Playa Hotel in Carmel, and they couldn't have made a better choice. She's got class, and in case you're wondering, yes she's related to Enrico Crugnale, the head chef at the Monterey Plaza Hotel. They're a dynamic duo...

And welcome indeed to Brian Whitmer, new executive chef at The Highlands Inn. He comes to us from the famous Montrachet restaurant in New York City...

BE GOOD and see you next time with the Grand Prize winner...

The Manger Event

MAY DEEP JOY be yours in this season. The Manger Event reminds us once again that there's peace aplenty. Always enough to feed and brighten each seeker.

GENE ARMAND of Columbia Records touches in with KRML Jazz Radio's Johnny Adams just about every week. Latest word on sales totals for the soundtrack album from Clint Bastwood's Bird bio-140,000 copies bought by Europeans and 100,000 purchased in the United States.

Johnny quotes Armand as saving that's "an amazing figure for a soundtrack item." Gene checked with the company's research department and found that 100,000 units sold would be considered a hit in the soundtrack category.

Carmel's former mayor called the whole project a labor of love—he really didn't care if it made money.

PERHAPS a few dozen folks hereabouts deserve the title Ace Jazz Buff. They're not in the business, but demonstrate dedication that enriches The Scene as well as those individual Larry Storelli must be counted whenever one surveys this sturdy crew. Tight pal of several jazz musicians, he functions as a walking newsletter. Oftentimes Storelli will put out the word on a particularly attractive booking well before the club does so. We meet over coffee now and then, comparing notes.

Long involved with limo services, Larry has assembled a package that just might help someone complete a Christmas gift list. He offers chauffeur-driven excursions down the coast with pit stops and then luncheon at Big Sur's River Inn. Luxury limo or van if larger numbers are involved.

River Inmhas live jazz on a regular basis. If people want the music in their tour experience, Larry will be more than happy to make eveningtime arrangements.

"Whether it's a family outing or a couple on a romantic adventure," he says, "the idea's affordable quality time in beautiful surroundings. And if you aim to party hearty over the holidays, make it Big Sur and I'll do the driving."

OCCASIONALLY THE WORDS come hard. Like now. But journalists must report that which equals birth as the biggest story of anyone's history.

Pacific Grove's Indira Smith has died. Age 72. Cancer. The news came several days ago via a phone call from her husband. Seaman-philosopher Leopold Smith also told when a memorial gathering of old friends would be held-right before burial ceremonies at the hometown cemetery.

When Leopold had a ship, he'd be gone for months at a time. It would be my pleasure to share a restaurant meal with Indira on occasion. The lady was so witty and attractive that a much younger man felt honored to be mistaken by waiters and cabbies for her swain-type date. Honored. Yes.

As reported here previously, Indira co-founded the historic Dial Records with her former spouse. She and jazz writer Ross Russell divorced in 1948. Before the split, their Los Angeles label brought out albums by major bebop warriors—Dizzy, Howard McGhee, Bird Parker, so many others. She was able to give an eyewitness account of the storied Lover Man session (July 1946) when Bird's mind blew.

"Bird said I was his pal...his friend," Indira recalled during an interview. "He was court-committed to Camarillo (State Hospital)...We visited him every weekend. Finally Bird was released into our custody on the condition that he not return to California. He never did."

Indira worked for many years as a Monterey Peninsula masseuse. She always exercised great skill, patience and kindness while practicing that chosen craft. And she never complained about her own pains.

We attended the local opening of Bird together. "There's so much in it to think about," she said afterwards. "Parts strike ... me as very sad. Give me time to unscramble all the feelings. Then we'll talk about the film."

Miss Willard served Duke for a quarter century (until his death in 1974) as his West Coast public relations rep and editor. She went on the road with the Ellington gang-and coordinated talent for the First Concert of Sacred Music at San Francisco's Grace Cathedral (1965).

She has been a juzz historian with record companies, the Smithsonian, Institute of Jazz Studies at Rutgers University. Patricia already has moved from Los Angeles to the nation's

Camerata Singers vocalize at mission

'TIS THE SEASON for choral ensembles; or ... the continuation of the musical movement of the 15th and 16th century as set by the Mastersingers and the aristocratic Minnesingers before them during the 12th through 14th. Here in the 20th century, the Camerata Singers directed by Vahe Aslanian perform works which spanned the centuries; - a challenge well met with some mixed results, in their presentation of "Christmas; Music at the Missions" on Saturday, Dec. 17th.

Carmel's Mission Basilica is a perfect setting for the recreation of this art form. The Mastersingers of the past were guilds of tradesmen - butchers, bakers, candlestick makers and others who loved to sing. Today most choral ensembles are made up of doctors, lawyers and business men and women who also love to sing. O Magnum Mysterium by Jacob Handl. sung a capella, and O Jesu Dulcissime by Giovanni Gabrieli, with singers and organ, set a quiet beginning. They were performed in the true school of the Venetian antiphonal technique which emerged in the middle 1500s. One choir up front making a loud statement, the other choir in the rear loft of the Basilica making a soft reply.

The effects of the Camerata were ethereal with good intonation. These pieces offered a plaintive quality; blended responses between the two choirs, interwoven with accuracy and rendered with ease. Aslanian directed his forces with authority which produced clean attacks and releases and more than a modicum of varied dynamics.

The two choirs then came together to perform, a capella, Hodie Christus Natus Est by Jan Sweelinck and O Admirabile Commercium by Josquin des Pres — followed by a joyous, Jubilate Deo by Giovanni Gabrieli and accompanied by the majestic sound of a sonorous brass ensemble and organ.

The Christmas Cantata by Alessandro Scarlatti featured soprano Karen Hall, the string ensemble and harpsichord. Miss Hall was vocally secure, with an even and beautiful lyric line — while the diction and rendition of the text fell short of interpretation. This, in addition to somewhat tentative entrances by the orchestra, flawed the pulse and kinetic drive. With musical England passing from the age of the Madrigal to the era of homophony, Henry Purcell gave the new movement a powerful forward push. In Purcell's Christmas Anthem. bass Kelly Alexander proclaimed "Behold, I bring you glad tidings" with a full authoritative voice, singing with gusto, but lacking the joyous ring the message should inspire. Linda Purdy, alto, and Peter Lewis, tenor, echoed the message with solid responses.

To round out the evening of masterful singing, director Aslanian selected a diamond, Glory to God from "A Christmas Cantata" by Alan Hovhaness. In his many compositions Hovhaness, of Armenian descent, reveals the influence of his long study of Asiatic and Middle Eastern music. Here the Camerata Singers entered the realm of the 20th century. A haunting alto sax solo was interpreted and well defined by Mel Buffo. Short, chant-like vocal lines firmly postulated by Misses Hall and Purdy was followed by a full sound from the chorus, which at times found the soprano section a little too hard. Four trumpets sounded a four-part canon, with the horns and trombones in ostinato outbursts, complemented by good percussion playing of timpani, cymbal, gong and bells. The oriental motif culminated into an explosive Gloria which brought the climax to a thunderous

Area designers set the stage for 'Gourmet Gala'

THE 12 interior designers and architects who will be creating cooking environments for the March of Dimes' Gourmet Gala Jan. 14 must not only think to this year's futuristic theme of "Gourmet Galactica," but also must consider the restrictions of the Monterey Sheraton's San Carlos Ballroom and the demands of the celebrity chefs who'll actually be cooking in these spaces.

"We got into some interesting dilemmas," says Linda Lamb, co-chairman of the Gala's Kitchen Committee. "We come up with brilliant designs, then have to deal with the assorted vagaries of space and fire department restrictions, plus the chefs' requirements that we allow room in our creations for a two burner stove, trash and plenty of storage. It's a classic case of artistic integrity versus practicality."

Taking the challenge this year are: Lamb. owner of L.S. Lamb Design Group; Jerry Welling, co-chairman of the committee, and senior events coordinator for the Monterey Conference Center; T. Scott Moore of T. Scott Moore Interior Design; Jan Gardner of Jan Gardner Interior Design; Sue Blondell and Ginna Landes, Landell Arts; Rudy Reate, R.I. Design Associates; Nancy McInnich, Nancy McInnich Interiors; Gretchen Flesher and Bill Foster, Flesher & Foster Architects; Vince Oles, Oles Architect AIA; Len Cardoni AIA and Associates; set designer Robert Benton, a four-time Oscar nominee most recently credited with the film, "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?"; and Joseph Rock and Keeth Lichtenberger, Joseph Rock Architect.

This year's futuristic theme extends to the celebrities attending, which include many of the "Star Trek" cast, and the invitations, which were designed by cartoonists Eldon Dedini and Gus Arriola. This year, for the first time, the invitations will be printed as posters and sold the night of the event.

The March of Dimes Gourmet Gala is a $150-per-person event which brings a traditionally sell-out black-tie crowd together to down hors d'oeuvres as they watch the celebrities cook during the cocktail hour. A 12-course dinner follows. Tickets may be obtained by contacting the March of Dimes, 373-8482

The Northern California Golf Association's Poppy Hills will be making its major tournament debut in the Spalding.

The word on Poppy Hills is that it's tough and challenging. NCGA officials are anxious to see how well it stands up to the challenge of some of the world's best players.

Other early entries include Canadian Dave Barr, winner of $219,244 in his 1988 tour year, and Roger Maltbie, the Los Gatos resident who has five tour titles to his credit.

Hearst Castle: a much-living monument

MANY A castle is but an empty shell—sturdy walls, perhaps, of stark gray stone, and unfurnished and undraped rooms that echo to a footfall and only hint of grandeur long ago.

A very few remain alive, with walls and towers washed and polished and rooms fresh and sparkling, as they always were.

One castle in America keeps fresh the splendor of a time when castles were built both for living and for pomp and circumstance, and were meant to last and to be used for a thousand years. That castle stands atop a hill its builder called enchanted — La Cuesta Encantada.

He also called it "Camp Hill" and built a ranch house on it — a ranch house like none other built before or since. It is on the coast in San Luis Obispo County, midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

William Randolph Hearst, publisher of 26 newspapers, congressman, and a man who helped to nominate a president (Franklin Delano Roosevelt), hired a distinguished architect, Julia Morgan, of Berkeley, to design a very special ranch house.

THE GOTHIC Library at Hearst Castle is but one of the detail-rich rooms that require diligent maintenance. Special

She designed La Casa Grande — we call it "Hearst Castle" — and three minor mansions, the guest houses named La Casa del Mar (House of the Sea), La Casa del Sol (Sun), and La Casa del skills developed by Hearst Monument custodians include gilding, textile conservation, care of marble, monitor-

Monte (Mountain). These guest houses served some of the most prominent people of Hearst's time.

The casas of Camp Hill were not just places to live and to entertain guests. They were show places for the amazing number and variety of art objects he had collected from around the world.

Hearst died in 1951 at the age of 88. In 1958, his heirs presented La Cuesta Encantada to the State, to be administered by the California Department of Parks and Recreation, as Hearst San Simeon State Historical Monument.

Since then, a small army of tour guides has conducted nearly 20 million tours of the castle and grounds. Visitors have come from every corner of California, from the rest of America, and from nearly every country of the world.

Another small army keeps the four fabulous buildings as near as possible to their condition when Hearst ruled his publishing empire and "held court" for many of the great and near-great of his day.

The buildings themselves, of course, require constant maintenance and sometimes restoration and repair made necessary by the ravages of time, the million pairs of feet per year that tread their walks, floors and stairs, and even the light that falls on carpets, tapestries, furniture, walls, and some 20,000 invaluable artifacts in the Hearst Castle collection.

The new 31,000-square-foot Visitor Center, completed in 1987, has added a new dimension to the preservation and restoration projects that must continue day after day and year after year to keep the castle ever new.

The Visitor Center not only serves the thousands of castle visitors per day, it provides more space and better facilities for preserving and restoring artifacts. It even gives visitors a chance to watch many of the artists and artisans perform the near-magic that brings fading and damaged artwork to new life and keeps tapestries, furniture, small sculptures, and many other kinds of display materials looking in perfect condition and as if they were ready for use by Hearst and his many guests.

The Hearst collection includes Renaissance panel paintings, Gothic tapestries, silver, medieval armor, ecclesiastical banners, European furniture, Hispano-Mooresque pottery, and decorative arts. Each type of art object ing of temperature and humidity, and metal care. Many conservation projects take several years to complete.

needs people with specialized training in material and technique of manufacture to recognize significant changes in condition.

Even normal housekeeping, such as vacuuming and metal polishing, require special skills to keep deterioration to an absolute minimum. Polishing 18th century silver, for instance, requires expertise at handling antique silver and applying a microcrystalline wax coating. Tapestry vacuuming requires knowledge of the structures of the fabrics and characteristics of their fibers.

Special skills developed by Hearst Monument custodians include gilding, textile conservation, care of marble, monitoring of temperature and humidity, and metal care.

Some of the conservation work is done by the regular staff, and some is done by consultants under contract. Much of the textile work and repair is done by student interns from Cal Poly of San Luis Obispo, working with the collection staff.

Staff members now working in the conservation lab at the Visitor Center are doing repair work on time-worn Refectory flags and a Renaissance banner, and frames and architectural pieces are being regilded.

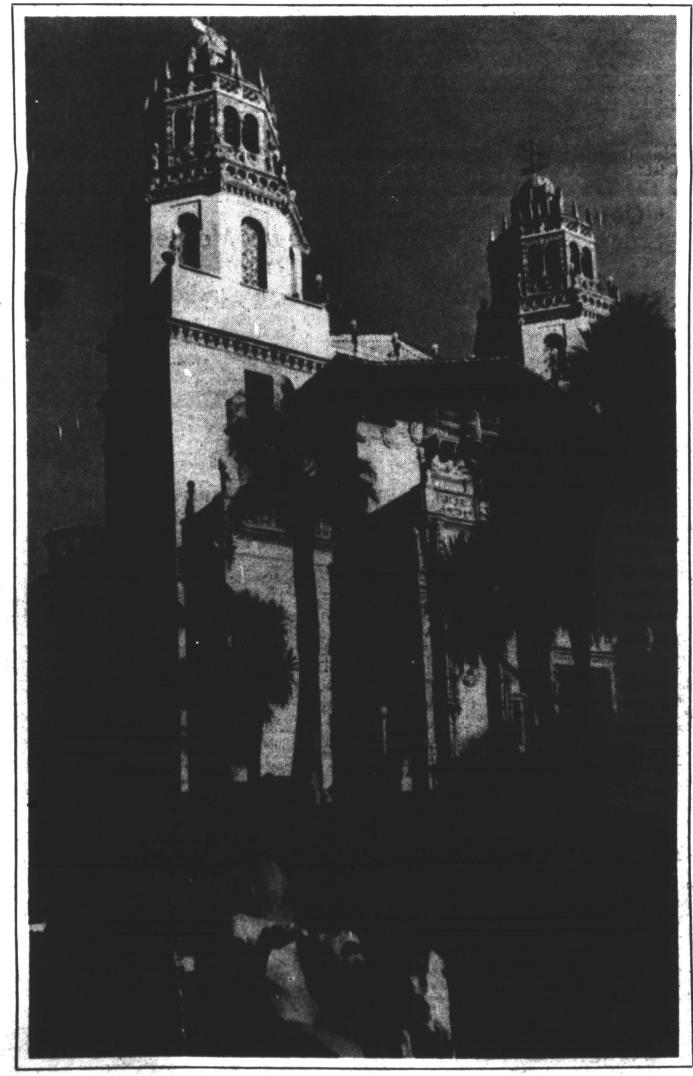

Large restoration projects are contracted to professional conservators, including some from the Getty Museum and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Some of the oil paintings are sent to the Balboa Art Conservation Center in San Diego.

Several different tours of Hearst Castle are offered. Tickets may be purchased at the monument, but advance reservations are always advisable, particularly on weekends and during the summer.

California residents can charge reservations to Visa or Master Card by calling 1-800-444-PARK between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. daily. Additional state park system reservation information is available by calling 1-800-952-5580 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

Reservations from out-of-state callers can be made through the toll number (619) 452-1950. Reservation application forms may be obtained by calling the toll-free information number or by writing to Reservations, Dept. of Parks and Recreation, Box 942896, Sacramento 94296-0001.

Take highways 1 or 101 south to visit "The Enchanted Hill."

Welcome to the Monterey Bay Area...Home of the California Sea Otter

No visit to the Monterey Bay Area is complete without a glimpse of this smallest of marine mammals.

Sea otters spend their lives in nearshore coastal waters where they sleep at the surface, often anchored in a drift of kelp. Groups of otters are called "rafts" because from a distance they look like small logs floating on the sea.

One of the few members of the animal kingdom to use a tool, an otter will place a rock on its chest as an anvil upon which to break open its shellfish prey. Mothers can often be seen sculling along on their backs with a small furry pup aboard.

Unlike seals and whales which have layers of blubber to keep them warm in cold ocean waters. the sea otters rely on their thick fur coats, which they spend many hours grooming every day. An oil spill which could damage their fur, causing the animals to die from exposure, is the greatest threat to their existence.

After the fur trade of the 18th and 19th centuries, sea otters were thought to be extinct in California. But a tiny band survived off the Big Sur Coast. Today otters can be found off San Luis Obispo, Monterey and Santa Cruz counties, yet they still number fewer than 1,400 animals. A "Threatened Species," the California sea otter is protected by state and federal law.

For sea otter gifts and souvenirs, free sea otter literature and information on how you can help protect the animals, please visit
